

Since the commencement of the sickness of General Grant from cancer in the throat, said to be produced by excessive smoking, several old stiffs about Virginia, Nev., have taken to gargling their throats with whisky. They do it a dozen times a day, or as often as they can get an invitation to drink, being determined to stave off cancer or fall dead—drunk—in the attempt.

DrFarrahCancerCenter.com